G. ESSAY (no more than 500 words): The Kosciuszko 303 Squadron not only played a crucial role in the Battle of Britain in 1940 during WWII, but also contributed significantly to the Allied war effort in the air. In speaking about the success of this unique Polish Air Force, Winston Churchill said, "Never was so much owed by so many to so few." Although receiving little recognition at the time, why is it important for history to understand the significance of the contributions made by these brave Polish pilots?
